SPEAKER: *David Watts

Software Solutions

David is well known to us as the author of the regular software reviews in the Journal. He qualified as a Professional Engineer, and has used his advanced mathematical skills to develop numerous trading models for institutional and private traders. His favourite methods of analysis include the use of digital filters and statistical tools to provide technical insight into a market's behaviour.

Basically, David will reprise his talk of two years ago, with an emphasis on the advances in the technology/cost equation and systems developed since then. He will focus on the software solutions available to professional practitioners and private investors alike. If time allows he will look at some of the more modern trading technologies available today for the analysis of time series data.

Unlike the uncertain background of two years ago, markets and job prospects seem more settled. That said, members should need no reminder that markets can and do turn on a sixpence, (and if they do, they are likely to lose money), so prospects may change....
